Luxury is an expression of our dreams, our imagination, woven with noble materials and rare ingredients. Its packaging is the visible expression of this universe.

The circular economy involves very concrete and much more practical features. Sustainable development, CSR, industrial ecology and eco-design are at the heart of these circular measures.

How can luxury goods and their packaging integrate the circular economy? How can the circular economy become part of luxury brands' strategy and operating processes?

From strategy to communication tools, from raw materials to the processes of manufacturing, developing and setting up circular measures, we will share inspiring initiatives which demonstrate the circular economy's impressive leverage in terms of innovation as well as the shared value opportunities it generates, meeting luxury client expectations.

LUXE PACK ESSENTIALS 2016

'EXPERIENTIAL PACKAGING' Designing the Consumer Experience into the Package

“The 2016 Luxe Pack Monaco Show contained a plethora of ideas, innovations and inspiration but the underlying theme for me as a designer and marketer was the x-plus factor contained in so many of the newest offerings from a variety of suppliers; ‘designing the experience into the package’.

Experiential packaging is the new mantra. If you believe in ‘Love at First Sight’ then you will relish the opportunity provided by designers and manufacturers to offer the tactile sensation through sight before the consumer gets to touch the product.

Producing that experience, visually, ergonomically, tactilely and subliminally is the end result of the suppliers rendition of the ultimate package design.

How a bottle feels, the texture of a folding carton, the snap of a compact being closed are all experiential. They can prejudice the consumer positively or negatively before she even tries the product. The consumer experience can connote luxury, modernity, practicality or status. Today more than ever when cosmetics companies are striving to reach the consumer on a multitude of levels, designing the consumer experience into the package can raise the bar when marketing a new product.”

Marc Rosen, Editor in chief LUXE PACK ESSENTIALS

Because it's difficult to integrate all details this trade show has to offer, LUXE PACK ESSENTIALS experts explore all exhibitor booths throughout the 3-day event to provide a post-show guide presenting the best innovations, new applications, unique experiences and additional highlights on pertinent show topics....

LUXE PACK ESSENTIALS, an illustrated summary guide, featuring detailed images, will be sent to all visitors post show. An effective way to reference the explosion of innovative solutions presented at LUXE PACK MONACO!

This year, we have an eclectic panel of design experts, creation and trends who will take part in this analysis:

Marc ROSEN, Designer, Chairman of MARC ROSEN ASSOCIATES (USA) and Editor in Chief of the LUXE PACK Essentials Guide

Internationally known, Marc Rosen is famous for his award winning fragrance, cosmetic, and fashion packaging. Both his creativity and expert knowledge of the luxury goods market will be available at the show.

Round table hosted by Christine MORIOT, CEO EOP'S

With the participation of LUXE PACK Monaco exhibitors

Taking a close look at the many new techniques and options to personalize primary and secondary packaging in order to create an exclusive relationship with the consumer...

Based on the innovative solutions proposed by exhibitors, this round table will provide visitors with keys features for differentiating and personalizing consumer packaging, a topic trending for every sector within today's luxury markets.

11:00 am – 12:30 pm – As if Made of One Piece ...

Round table moderated by Ute von BUCH, Editor in chief, CREATIVE VERPACKEN
Avec Petrus FALLER, Founder and General Manager, the BOOJA-BOOJA Company
Stefanie HANSSEN, Founder and General Manager, Frau TONISPARFUM

Just imagine that you want to unwrap a luxury product from a precious packaging. The packaging is so beautiful that you hesitate for a moment but finally your curiosity prevails. Then your surprise is great, because in the package you do not find a product suggesting the same value. You are disappointed and you think “I should not have opened the packaging”. And there is also the other case: a trivial packaging from which a proud swan is emerging.

Product and packaging belong together and constitute one unit, also in terms of design. However, this only works if the two are conceded the same value. One cannot without the other – and there should also be a story behind all this. Discuss with Stefanie Hanssen of “Frau Tonis Parfum”, Berlin, and Petrus Faller of “Booja-Booja”, Freiburg, the producer of noble vegan truffles how packaging is perceived and how it is influenced by the product perception.

1:30 – 2:00pm – CEW France, Developing a New Business Dimension for the #1 Beauty Professionals' network

4:00 – 4:45 pm – Laser Texturing. How to Steer Creation into a New Dimension.

By Adrien RODRIGUES, Laser Product Manager, GF Machining Solutions
And Raúl GARCIA BLASQUEZ, CEO, MICORRELLEUS

Taking into account new market trends, mostly in the packaging and cosmetic industries, laser texturing is a fully digital process that adds high quality textures to products, while eliminating all constraints from the design phase. Laser texturing takes differentiation to the next level and improves perceived product value to satisfy designers of the most innovative new products.

5:00 – 5:45 pm – Additive Manufacturing and 3D Printing: State of the Art and Luxury Applications. Pack&Strat®: The Patented French Additive Manufacturing Process, Designed for High-speed 3D Packaging.

By Claude BARLIER, Chairman, Founder of CIRTES SA, President of INORI SAS

For over twenty years, additive manufacturing, described as the 4th industrial revolution, has interested the aeronautics, automobile, medical and, more recently, luxury goods industries.... And now it's packaging's turn!

This conference gives a complete overview of the new additive manufacturing technologies, the basic principles and materials used, then presents the main applications for luxury goods, in the form of models, tooling and "printed" pieces.

Based on its patented additive manufacturing process, Stratoconception®, CIRTES presents Pack&Strat®, an innovative patented 3D digital packaging solution.
